The Executive Committee for the Exhibition of Stained Glass desire to preface the Catalogue with a few explanatory remarks.

The authorities of the South Kensington Museum offered a certain number of small and two large window spaces to British glass painters for the purpose of an exhibition. Its special object was to encourage the art of glass painting as a fine art, to raise it, as is much required, to that standard; and also to elevate the public taste in the appreciation of it.

On these grounds the exhibitors accepted the proposal, and on these also their Committee have acted in the selection and rejection of works sent in, so far as the disadvantages attending the exhibition would allow.

This exhibition must not by any means be considered to represent in any adequate degree the state of the art in this country. The time for producing works was very limited. Several of the principal glass painters were already over fully occupied with orders; and by pressure of time and the unwillingness of some persons for whom the glass was being executed to allow of its retention for the purpose of exhibition, and for other unavoidable reasons, they have been unable to send such works as might otherwise have been produced and exhibited. The window spaces also being generally small, or not of suitable shapes, and otherwise not specially adapted to such a purpose, added most materially to the causes of the incompleteness of the exhibition.

It is to be hoped that artists in this beautiful and much desired form of art will combine to produce an exhibition in some future year more fairly representative of their powers and the advance of art in this country, when the opportunities may be greater.

No. 1.—STAIRCASE WINDOW.

M., A., and W. H. O'Connor, 4, Berners Street, Oxford Street, London.

Memorial painted glass for the altar window of University College, Oxford. Designed and executed for the Very Reverend the Master of University College, Oxford.

The five principal openings contain ten scenes in the life of our Lord, commencing with His triumphal entry into Jerusalem, and terminating with His Resurrection. In the tracery is a Majesty attended by angels and archangels. The decorative portion consists of flowing decorated white ornament on grounds of colour.

The inscription at the base is, "In honorem Dei, et in piam memoriam Joan. Radcliffe, M.D., Benefac. hujus Coll. Munificent. ex devo Fred. Car. Plumptre, S.T.B., Magistre. An. Dom. MDCCCLXIV."

* No. 2.—NORTH CLOISTER.

J. T. Lyon & Co., 13, Berners Street, Oxford Street, London.

A three-light window, illustrative of the Parable of the Sower.

The centre light contains a figure representing "The Sower," the upper portion or canopy being filled with an ornamental arrangement of the passion flower; below, in a square panel, are contained the lamb and an arrangement of the white lily. The border is composed of the vine leaf and grapes.

The side lights illustrate the various phases of the parable in subjects, upon a ground of oak leaves, with the text "His leaf shall not wither," running through it, the borders being composed of wheat ears. The figure of a youth carried through four of the subjects illustrates the growth of Divine Truth resulting from the study of the Word of God.
